All:

We had secured preliminary pricing for 200' of 6' tall stockade fence composed of vinyl. The vendor we solicited has subsequently failed to return calls/emails for the past 2 weeks. I asked Angela to resume a search for a fence contractor that could do the job.

In the course of her calls, she was told by one of companies she talked to (Green & Son Contracting) that the best fence for durability and longevity would be cedar, rather than the vinyl. He stated that a cedar fence would be an insect deterrent as well. He told Angela that the vinyl would degrade quickly in sun/heat and becomes brittle quite soon, within 5 to 10 years.

He will quote us cedar and composite fencing. He will provide us a quote this afternoon. The composite will be more expensive but it would carry a longer warranty.

We'll keep everyone posted on our progress.

Don
